

The diagram illustrates the layout of a book spread. It features a central gutter with two pages extending outwards. A solid black line represents the final crop line, forming a diamond shape in the center. A dashed black line represents the bleed line, which is wider than the crop line. A dashed blue line represents the safety margin, which is the innermost boundary. A solid pink line represents the outer edge of the page. Three arrows point from text labels to these lines: a pink arrow to the bleed line, a black arrow to the crop line, and a blue dashed arrow to the safety margin.
